

CANADA UNDER ATTACK

Testimonial

I have read Paul Cook's "Canada Under Attack" not once but twice. It is the best compendium of what a loss Canada has suffered in capacity, sovereignty and credibility among its allies and its own citizens through the wilful neglect of its armed forces. But criticism is one thing, proposing positive, and credible solutions is far more important and, throughout, Paul shares with us his comprehensive research and expertise in all elements of military capabilities and their pertinent organization for the security of Canadian interests. He has opened and filled much of the serious debate about the role and future of our Canadian Forces. It is not just a good, but an excellent and required read for those who profess to call themselves informed and concerned Canadians.

Major General (retired) Clive J. Addy, OMM, OStJ, CD

Chair

The National Security Group

January 14, 2006