Come and join us in exploring the wonderful multiple meanings of "Worship Come to Its Senses," a title borrowed from one of Don Saliers' books. These words summon the church to wake up and become more aware of what it is and is not doing in worship. These words remind us that we experience worship through our physical bodies and senses, that what we hear, see, touch, taste, and smell during worship may become the means whereby we experience the transforming grace of God. These words point to the power of worship to nurture "senses" like Awe, Wonder, Delight, Joy, Truthfulness, and Hope.
